

Fast Food Workers

Fast Food Workers prepare a restricted range of foods in a fast food establishment. They also take and serve food and beverage orders, and receive payment from customers.

Scan the QR code to the right for a Job Outlook career profile with more information.

How do employers recruit? How can job seekers find a job?

Franchises generally advertise through their company website

Interested job seekers should apply online for positions

Employers often reject applicants based on their availability to work — listing maximum availabilities can increase the chance of winning a job!

What job seekers need to know when they apply

Online applications involve a pre-loaded quiz — this tests whether an applicant is suited to a particular role. Passing these tests is crucial!

Many successful applicants are young and inexperienced

Tips for interviews

Group interviews are common

Dress neatly and tidily

Arrive on time

Be prepared for activities and puzzles which focus on team work and customer service

What personal qualities are important?

Team work skills

Positive attitude

A good smile

"Bubbly and outgoing—customer engagement is key."

Advice from Fast Food employers

"Be able to speak and communicate—have a bit of confidence."

"Give it a go. Have some team sport experience if you can."

"Need to start applying as early as possible."